THE EPITLES OF SENECA

non repetes, non exigo. Profuisset tutum sit. Nullum est odium perniciosius quam e beneficiis violati pudore.
Vale.

LXXXII.

Seneca Lucilio suo salutem

1 Desii iam de te esse sollicitus. "Quem," inquis, "deorum sponsorum acceptisti?" Eum scilicet, qui neminem fulit, animum recte ac boni amatorem. In tuto pars tui melior est. Potest fortuna tibi injuriam facere; quod ad rem magis pertinet, non timeo, ne tu facias tibi. 1, qua ire coepisti et in isto te vitae
2 habitu compone placide, non molliter. Male mihi esse malo quam molliter; male 1 nunc sic excipe, quemadmodum a populo solet dici: dure, aspere, laboriose. Audire solemus sic quorundam vitam laudari, quibus invidetur: "molliter vivit"; hoc dicunt: "mollis est." Paulatim enim effeminatur animus atque in similitudinem otii sui et pigritiae, in qua iacet, solvitur. Quid ergo? Viro non vel obrigescere satius est? Deinde idem delicati timunt, 2 cui vitam suam fecere similem. Multum interest

1 male added by Muretus.
2 morte after timent deleted by Madvig.

---

a The words are put into the mouth of an imaginary benefactor who fears for his own life.
b Cf. Tac. Agric. iv. 42 proprium humani ingenii est odisse quam laueris.
c One who incurs liability by taking upon himself the debt of another. It is part of the process known as intercessio.
d Rather than mollis.

240
have received; I do not ask it back; I do not demand it. Let it be safe to have conferred a favour." \( ^a \) There is no worse hatred than that which springs from shame at the desecration of a benefit. \( ^b \) Farewell.

LXXXII. ON THE NATURAL FEAR OF DEATH

I have already ceased to be anxious about you. "Whom then of the gods," you ask, "have you found as your voucher?" \( ^c \) A god, let me tell you, who deceives no one,—a soul in love with that which is upright and good. The better part of yourself is on safe ground. Fortune can inflict injury upon you; what is more pertinent is that I have no fears lest you do injury to yourself. Proceed as you have begun, and settle yourself in this way of living, not luxuriously, but calmly. I prefer to be in trouble rather than in luxury; and you had better interpret the term "in trouble" as popular usage is wont to interpret it: living a "hard," "rough," "toilsome" life. We are wont to hear the lives of certain men praised as follows, when they are objects of unpopularity: "So-and-So lives luxuriously"; but by this they mean: "He is softened by luxury." For the soul is made womanish by degrees, and is weakened until it matches the ease and laziness in which it lies. Lo, is it not better for one who is really a man even to become hardened \( ^d \)? Next, these same dandies fear that which they have made their own lives resemble. Much difference is there between
THE EPISTLES OF SENEC\A

3 inter otium et conditivum. "Quid ergo?" inquis, "non satius est vel sic iacere quam in istis officiorum verticibus volutari?" Utraque res detestabilis est, et contractio et torpor. Puto, aequi qui in odoribus iacet, mortuus est quam qui rapitur unco.

Otium sine litteris mors est et hominis vivi sepultura. Quid deinde prodest secessisse? Tamquam non trans maris nos sollicitudinum causae persequantur! Quae latebra est, in quam non intret metus mortis? Quae tam emuneta et in altum subducta vitae quies, quam non dolor territet? Quacunque te abdiceris, mala humana circumstrepent. Multa extra sunt, quae circumcunct nos, quo aut fallunt aut urgent, multa intus, quae in media solitudine exaequunt.

5 Philosophia circumdanda est inexpugnabilis murus, quem fortuna multis machinis lassitum non transit. In insuperabili loco stat animus, qui externa deseruit, et arce se sua vindicate; infra illum omne telum cadit. Non habet, ut putamus, fortuna longas manus; neminem occupat nisi haerentem sibi. Itaque quantum possimum, ab illa resiliamus; quod sola praestabat sui naturaeque cognitio. Sciat, quo iturus sit, unde ortus, quod illi bonum, quod malum sit, quid petat, quid evitet, quae sit illa ratio, quae adeptenda ae

1 quo aut later MSS. ; quae aut VPb.
2 cognitio later MSS. ; condition Vb; condition p.

---

a Conditivum (more frequently and properly conditorium) is a grim jest. The word is mostly found in an adjectival sense applying to fruits and grain stored for later use.

b Compare Arnold's nineteenth-century definition of culture.

242
EPISTLE LXXXII.

lying idle and lying buried! "But," you say, "is it not better even to lie idle than to whirl round in these eddies of business distraction?" Both extremes are to be deprecated—both tension and sluggishness. I hold that he who lies on a perfumed couch is no less dead than he who is dragged along by the executioner's hook.

Leisure without study is death; it is a tomb for the living man. What then is the advantage of retirement? As if the real causes of our anxieties did not follow us across the seas! What hiding-place is there, where the fear of death does not enter? What peaceful haunts are there, so fortified and so far withdrawn that pain does not fill them with fear? Wherever you hide yourself, human ills will make an uproar all around. There are many external things which compass us about, to deceive us or to weigh upon us; there are many things within which, even amid solitude, fret and ferment.

Therefore, gird yourself about with philosophy, an impregnable wall. Though it be assaulted by many engines, Fortune can find no passage into it. The soul stands on unassailable ground, if it has abandoned external things; it is independent in its own fortress; and every weapon that is hurled falls short of the mark. Fortune has not the long reach with which we credit her; she can seize none except him that clings to her. Let us then recoil from her as far as we are able. This will be possible for us only through knowledge of self and of the world of Nature. The soul should know whither it is going and whence it came, what is good for it and what is evil, what it seeks and what it avoids, and what is that Reason which distinguishes between the desirable and the undesirable, and thereby tames fugienda discernat, qua cupiditatum mansuescit insania, timorum saevitia compescitur.
THE EPISTLES OF SENECA

7 Haec quidam putant ipsos etiam sine philosophia repressisse. Sed, cum securos aliquis casus expertus est, exprimitur sera confessio. Magna verba ex-cidunt, cum tortor poposcit manum, cum mors proprius accessit. Possis illi dicere: facile provocabas mala absentia; ecce dolor, quem tolerabilem esse dicebas, ecce mors, quam contra multa animose locutus es; sonant flagella, gladius micat:

Nunc animis opus, Aenea, nunc pectore firme.

8 Faciet autem illud firmum adsidua meditatio, si non verba exercueris, sed animum, si contra mortem te praeparaveris, adversus quam non exhortabitur nec adtollet, qui cavillationibus tibi persuadere temptaverit mortem malum non esse. Libet enim, Lucili virorum optime, ridere inepias Graecas, quas nondum, quamvis mirer, excussi. Zenon noster haec collectione utitur: "nullum malum gloriosum est; mors autem gloria est; mors ergo non est malum." Profecisti; liberatus sum metu; post hoc non dubitabo porrigere cervicem. Non vis severius loqui nec morituro risum.

---

1 quidam later MSS.; quidem VPb.
2 proprius later MSS.; potius VPb.

* Vergil, Aen. vi. 261.

b Frag. 196 von Arnim.
EPISTLE LXXXII.

the madness of our desires and calms the violence of our fears.

Some men flatter themselves that they have checked these evils by themselves even without the aid of philosophy; but when some accident catches them off their guard, a tardy confession of error is wrung from them. Their boastful words perish from their lips when the torturer commands them to stretch forth their hands, and when death draws nearer! You might say to such a man: "It was easy for you to challenge evils that were not near-by; but here comes pain, which you declared you could endure; here comes death, against which you uttered many a courageous boast! The whip cracks, the sword flashes:

Ah now, Aeneas, thou must needs be stout
And strong of heart!"²

This strength of heart, however, will come from constant study, provided that you practise, not with the tongue but with the soul, and provided that you prepare yourself to meet death. To enable yourself to meet death, you may expect no encouragement or cheer from those who try to make you believe, by means of their hair-splitting logic, that death is no evil. For I take pleasure, excellent Lucilius, in poking fun at the absurdities of the Greeks, of which, to my continual surprise, I have not yet succeeded in ridding myself. Our master Zeno³ uses a syllogism like this: "No evil is glorious; but death is glorious; therefore death is no evil." A cure, Zeno! I have been freed from fear; henceforth I shall not hesitate to bare my neck on the scaffold. Will you not utter sterner words instead of rousing a dying man to laughter? Indeed, Lucilius, I could movere? Non mehercules facile tibi dixerim, utrum ineptior fuerit, qui se haec interrogatione indicavit mortis metum extinguere, an qui hoe, tamquam ad 10 rem pertineret, conatus est solvere. Nam et ipse interrogationem contrarium opposuit ex eo natam, quod mortem inter indifferentia ponimus, quae δούλαρα Graeci vocant. "Nihil," inquit, "indifferens gloriosum est; mors autem gloriosum est; ergo mors non est indifferentis." Haec interrogationis uti obrepapat: mors non est gloriosa, sed fortiter morti gloriosum est. Et cum dicis: "indifferens nihil gloriosum est," concedo tibi ita, ut dicam nihil gloriosum esse nisi circa indifferentia. Tamquam indifferentia esse dico, id est nec bona nec mala, morbum, dolorem, paupertatem, exilium, mortem. 11 Nihil horum per se gloriosum est, nihil tamen sine his. Laudatur enim non paupertas, sed ille, quem paupertas non summittit nec incurvat. Laudatur non exilium, sed ille qui in exilium ivit tanquam misisset. Laudatur non dolor, sed ille, quem nihil coegit dolor. Nemo mortem laudat, sed eum, cuius mors ante abstulit animum quam conturbavit. Omnia ista per se non sunt honesta nec gloriosa, sed quicquid ex illis virtus adiit tractavitque, honestum et gloriosum facit; illa in medio posita sunt; interest, utrum malitia illis an virtus manum admovert. Mors enim illa, quae in Catone gloriosa est, in Bruto statim
THE EPISTLES OF SENECA

1 Pd 1 V omit sed . . . paupertas.
2 nec later MSS.: sed VPb.
3 sed ille qui in exilium ivit tanquam Madvig; . . . ut quam MSS.

---

* Defined by the Greeks as "things which have no direct connexion either with happiness or with unhappiness."
* See Cicero, De Finibus, iii. 50 ff.
* i.e., are "indifferent" (cf. § 14 indifferentia ac media dicuntur).

246
The Complete Text can be found on our CD:
Primary Literary Sources For Ancient Literature
which can be purchased on our Website:
or by sending $64.95 in check or money order to:
Brainfly Inc.
5100 Garfield Ave. #46
Sacramento CA 95841-3839

TEACHER’S DISCOUNT:
If you are a TEACHER you can take advantage of our teacher’s discount. Click on Teachers Discount on our website (www.Brainfly.net) or Send us $55.95 and we will send you a full copy of Primary Literary Sources For Ancient Literature AND our 5000 Classics CD (a collection of over 5000 classic works of literature in electronic format (.txt)) plus our Wholesale price list.

If you have any suggestions such as books you would like to see added to the collection or if you would like our wholesale prices list please send us an email to:
webcomments@brainfly.net