LII

Seneca Lucilio suo salutem

1 Quid est hoc, Lucili, quod nos alio tendentes alio trahit et eo, unde recedere cupimus, impellit? Quid conlectatur cum animo nostro nec permettis nobis quicquam semel velle? Fluctuum inter varia consilia.
   Nihil libere volumus, nihil absolute, nihil semper.

2 "Stultitia," inquis, "est, cui nihil constat, nihil diu placet." Sed quomodo nos aut quando ab illa revellemus? Nemo per se satis valet ut emergat; oportet manum aliquid porrigit, aliquid educat.

3 Quosdam ait Epicurus ad veritatem sine ulius adiutorio exisse, fecisse sibi ipsos viam. Hos maxime laudat, quibus ex se impetus fuit, qui se ipsi pro-tulerunt. Quosdam indigere ope aliena, non ituros, si nemo praecesserit, sed bene secuturos. Ex his Metrodorum ait esse; egregium hoc quoque, sed secundae sortis ingenium. Nos ex illa prima nota non sumus; bene nobiscum agitur, si in secundam recipimus. Ne hunc quidem tempseris hominem, qui alieno beneficio esse salvus potest; et hoc multum est, velle servari.

4 Praeter haec adhuc invenies genus aliud hominum ne ipsum quidem fastidiendum eorum, qui cogi ad rectum compellique possunt, quibus non duce tantum opus sit, sed adiutore et, ut ita dicam, coactore. Hic

LII. ON CHOOSING OUR TEACHERS

What is this force, Lucilius, that drags us in one direction when we are aiming in another, urging us on to the exact place from which we long to withdraw? What is it that wrestles with our spirit, and does not allow us to desire anything once for all? We veer from plan to plan. None of our wishes is free, none is unqualified, none is lasting. "But it is the fool," you say, "who is inconsistent; nothing suits him for long." But how or when can we tear ourselves away from this folly? No man by himself has sufficient strength to rise above it; he needs a helping hand, and some one to extricate him.

 Epicurus remarks that certain men have worked their way to the truth without any one's assistance, carving out their own passage. And he gives special praise to these, for their impulse has come from within, and they have forged to the front by themselves. Again, he says, there are others who need outside help, who will not proceed unless someone leads the way, but who will follow faithfully. Of these, he says, Metrodorus was one; this type of man is also excellent, but belongs to the second grade. We ourselves are not of that first class, either; we shall be well treated if we are admitted into the second. Nor need you despise a man who can gain salvation only with the assistance of another; the will to be saved means a great deal, too.

You will find still another class of man,—and a class not to be despised,—who can be forced and driven into righteousness, who do not need a guide as much as they require someone to encourage and, as it were, to force them along. This is the third tertius color est. Si quae ris huius quoque exemplar, Hermarchum ait Epicurus talemuisse. Itaque alteri magis gratulatur, alterum magis suspect: quamvis enim ad eundem finem uterque pervenerit, tamen maior est laus idem effecisse in difficiliore materia.

5 Puta enim duo aedificia excitata esse, ab imo disparia, aequa excelsa atque magnifica. Alterum puram aream accepit; illic protinus opus crevit. Alterum fundamenta lassarunt in mollem et fluvidam humum missa multitumque laboris exhaustum est, dum pervenit ad solidum. Intuenti ambo quicquid fecit alter in aperto est, alterius magna pars et difficilior latet. Quaedam ingenia facilia, expedita, quaedam manu, quod aiunt, facienda sunt et in fundamentis suis occupata. Itaque illum ego feliciorem dixerim, qui nihil negotii secum habuit, hunc quidem melius de se meruisse, qui malignitatec naturae suaee vicic et ad sapientiam se non perduxit, sed extraxit.

7 Hoc durum ac laboriosum ingenium nobis datum scias licet. Imus per obstantia. Itaque puguenus, aliquorum invocemus auxilium. "Quem," inquis, "invocabo? Hunc aut illum?" Tu vero etiam ad priores revertere, qui vacant; adiuvar nos possunt variety. If you ask me for a man of this pattern also, Epicurus tells us that Hermarchus was such.

And of the two last-named classes, he is more ready to congratulate the one, but he feels more respect for the other; for although both reached the same goal, it is a greater credit to have brought about the same result with the more difficult material upon which to work.

Suppose that two buildings have been erected, unlike as to their foundations, but equal in height and in grandeur. One is built on faultless ground, and the process of erection goes right ahead. In the other case, the foundations have exhausted the building materials, for they have been sunk into soft and shifting ground and much labour has been wasted in reaching the solid rock. As one looks at both of them, one sees clearly what progress the former has made, but the larger and more difficult part of the latter is hidden. So with men's dispositions; some are pliable and easy to manage, but others have to be laboriously wrought out by hand, so to speak, and are wholly employed in the making of their own foundations. I should accordingly deem more fortunate the man who has never had any trouble with himself; but the other, I feel, has deserved better of himself, who has won a victory over the meanness of his own nature, and has not gently led himself, but has wrestled his way, to wisdom.

You may be sure that this refractory nature, which demands much toil, has been implanted in us.
There are obstacles in our path; so let us fight, and call to our assistance some helpers. "Whom," you say, "shall I call upon? Shall it be this man or that?" There is another choice also open to you; you may go to the ancients; for they have the 8 non tantum qui sunt, sed qui fuerunt. Ex his autem, qui sunt, eligamus non eos, qui verba magna celeritate praecepit et communes locos volvant et in privato circulantur, sed eos, qui vita\(^1\) docent, qui cum dixerunt, quid faciendum sit, probant faciendo, qui docent, quid vitandum sit, nec unquam in eo, quod fugiendum dixerunt, deprehenduntur.

time to help you. We can get assistance not only from the living, but from those of the past. Let us choose, however, from among the living, not men who pour forth their words with the greatest glibness, turning out commonplace, and holding, as it were, their own little private exhibitions,\(^a\)—not these, I say, but men who teach us by their lives, men who tell us what we ought to do and then prove it by practice, who show us what we should avoid, and then are never caught doing that which they have ordered us to avoid.

Choose as a guide one whom you will admire more when you see him act than when you hear him speak. Of course I would not prevent you from listening also to those philosophers who are wont to hold public meetings and discussions, provided they appear before the people for the express purpose of improving themselves and others, and do not practise their profession for the sake of self-seeking. For what is baser than philosophy courting applause? Does the sick man praise the surgeon while he is operating? In silence and with reverent awe submit to the cure.\(^b\) Even though you cry applause, I shall listen to your cries as if you were groaning when your sores were touched. Do you wish to bear witness that you are attentive, that you are stirred by the grandeur of the subject? You may do this at the proper time: I shall of course allow you to pass judgment and cast a vote as to the better course. Pythagoras made his pupils keep silence for five years; do you think that they had the right on that account to break out immediately into applause?

How mad is he who leaves the lecture-room in a happy frame of mind simply because of applause from the ignorant! Why do you take pleasure in being praised by men whom you yourself cannot praise?

potes ipse laudare? Disserebat populo Fabianus, sed audiebatur modo. Erumpet interdum magnus clamor laudantium, sed quem rerum magnitudo evocaverat, non sonus inoffense ac molliter orationis elapsae. Intersit aliquid inter clamorem theatri et scholae; est aliqua et laudandi decentia.\(^1\) Omnia rerum omnium, si observentur, indicia sunt et argumentum morum ex minimis quoque licet capere: inpudicum et incessus ostendit et manus mota et unum interdum responsum et relatus ad caput digitus et flexus oculorum. 13 Hinc atque illinc philosopho manus auditor intentat et super ipsum caput mirantium turba consistit; non laudatur ille nunc, si intellegis, sed clamatur. Relinquuntur istae voces illis artibus, quae propositum habent populo placere; philosophia adoretur. Permittendum erit aliando iuvenibus sequi impetum animi, tum autem, cum hoc ex impetu facient, cum silentium sibi imperare non poterunt. Talis laudatio aliquid exhortationis adfert ipsis audientibus et animos adulscendum eam stimulat. Ad rem commoveantur, non ad verba copiosa; alioquin nocet illis eloquentia, si non rerum cupditatem facit, sed sui.
